Host Rules

The Game is played over 6 Rounds Called Chapters in the following sequence.

1. Reveal and read the Chapter Clue
2. Reveal Clues the Chapter Clue tells you to reveal.
3. Players Reveal the page in their Dossier Associated with that chapter.
 - a. Some extra Characters must wait until a specific chapter to unfold their character cards. They would do that during this step when the specified chapter starts.

At the End of the 5th Before the 6th Chapter is revealed Players will fill out accusation sheets.

The player/Players who got the most correct answers win. Extra Characters only win if they fulfill their secret win condition. If they have no secret win condition they win as described in these rules.

Reveal the Chapter Clue

At the start of each Chapter look for the clue that will simply read Chapter Clue X, Where X is the Chapter number.

e.g. Chapter Clue 3

The clue number in the top right corner will simply read the chapter Number a dot and then a zero.

e.g. Clue 3.0

To begin the game Reveal Clue 1.0

Revealing Clues

Non-Chapter Clues will be revealed when instructed too by either a chapter clue, A Suspect Dossier or an Extra Character Card.

e.g. Reveal Clue 2.b

When a clue is revealed, it should be unfolded and read aloud by one of the players so that all of the players can hear, it should then be placed unfolded where all players can access it.

Locked Clues

Locked Clues are attempted to be revealed when instructed by a chapter clue a suspect Dossier or an Extra Character card. It will be noted that instead of saying Reveal clue. The instruction will be to attempt to reveal a clue.

e.g. Attempt to reveal locked clue 5b

A locked clue can only be attempted to be revealed once. And only during the instructed time.

If players fail to unlock the clue they will not be able to look at it during the game.

To Attempt to reveal a clue the follow the process described.

1. Unfold the first flap and ask the question written down.
2. Give players time to discuss and answer but have that time no longer than 5 minutes.
3. Players then individually guess an answer. It is recommended they write down their answer on a slip of paper to keep track of them easier.
4. Unfold the second flap revealing the answer.
5. If any single player guesses correctly the clue may be revealed
6. If no player guesses correctly the clue is not revealed and is set aside the players will not learn its contents

Suspect Dossiers

At the start of each chapter players should be instructed to turn to the page associated with that chapter.

They may not turn the page until that chapter has started, and the Chapter clue tells them to do so.

Chapter one is divided into 3 sections: The scenario, who are you, and Your secrets.

The Scenario starts every chapter and informs players what is happening in the game.

Who are you gives the player their basic backstory, during chapter one they should introduce themselves as their characters using the backstory information provided.

Your Darker Side Tells each player their characters' darkest secrets. They Don't want these secrets to be revealed. Players should Ideally try to keep their darker secrets secret for as long as possible.

Other Chapters

Are divided into the following 3 sections: The Scenario, what you know, Your Secrets

The scenario informs the players what's currently happening in the game.

What you know: Players Learn information their character either knows or recently learned about. Players are encouraged to reveal this information to the other players as it is vital to solving the case.

Your Secrets: Players will reveal this information but only if directly asked about. Otherwise it should stay secret.

E.g.

Player 1: Hey, did you Go into Room A?

Player 2: Yes, I did go into Room A, It was because I wanted to spy on Player B

It is important to note you can never voluntarily reveal information In Your secrets or Your darker Side sections.

Information Restrictions

Players may never lie at any time, but they may refuse to answer a question they are not required to answer.

Unless otherwise specified a player must reveal their secrets from previous rounds if a relevant question is asked.

Unless otherwise stated players are allowed to look at information already revealed to them. For example, Clues or Previous pages in their dossier book.

Players may never show each other Their Dossier book.

Exceptions

Sometimes Dossier books will tell players they cannot reveal information before this point. This means they may no longer flip the page back to pages they already looked at.

Dossier books may also say players are not allowed to reveal information they already looked at.

Chapter Play

During Chapters Players should discuss information they learned and try to learn hidden information by asking the right questions to each other to reveal players' secrets.

You may either set a timer and progress to the next chapter when the timer runs out. Or progress to the next chapter when players have run out of things to discuss. It is up to the host's discretion to pace the game as they see fit.

I personally Recommend 20 – 40 minutes per chapter for the ideal happy medium between to short and too long.

Chapter Progression

When you are ready to progress to the next chapter Reveal the next Chapter clue and follow its instructions.

Accusations

At the end of chapter 5 Players may make an accusation based on the questions asked in the chapter 5 clue.

There are six questions. Players will write down their answers on the accusation sheets that correspond to question number. For example, they should write the answer to question number 1 indicated on their accusation sheet. Answer 1.

After all accusation forums have been filled out Progress to chapter 6.

Confessional statements

Each Dossiers Chapter 6 page will contain a Confession statement Code Word. The Chapter 6 clue will instruct the player who has a specific code word to read their confession.

e.g. May the player with the Code word Red please read the Confession Statement Labeled Red.

That player will then read their confession to the rest of the players.

At the end of each confessions statement there is another code word. Which will instruct another player to read their confession statement.

The last Confession statement will have the solution to the questions.

Scoring

Each player receives one point for each correct answer got. The player or Players with the highest points win the game.

If a player gets all answers correct they are awarded the title Master Detective.

Extra Characters

Extra Characters do not win or lose the game based on accusation although they may participate in the accusations and murder solving.

Each Extra Character has a secret win condition that they will reveal at the end of round 6. If they completed their secret win condition they win. If not, they lose.

Extra Characters may only look at their hidden win condition when Their character card instructs them to do so.

That's all the rules, you are ready to begin the game!

Dear Cynthia

Cynthia, I don't know how else to reach you. You won't answer my calls, you blocked me everywhere, and I know you told your friends not to talk to me - but you can't just erase me like that. We had something real. You felt it. I know you did.

I see you pretending. Laughing like nothing ever happened. But I know you. I know that little crack in your smile when you fake it. You always did that when you were hurting. Don't lie to yourself, not to me. We don't get over people like that. Not when it was real.

Every night I walk past your street. Just to feel close to you. Just to remind myself that you're still here, still breathing the same air I breathe. Do you ever think about me when the house is quiet and you're lying awake? Do you miss my voice? My hands? You used to say I made you feel safe. What happened to that?

You think I'm crazy. I'm not. I'm just in love. Is that a crime now? To care too much? You said no one ever understood you like I did - so why are you running from that?

I saw you last Thursday. At the café. You were with him. Laughing. Were you pretending then, too? Is he some kind of replacement? Does he know you twitch your leg when you lie? That you hate roses but always said yes to them anyway.

You can keep trying to shut me out, but I'm not going anywhere. Not until you talk to me. Just one real conversation, that's all I'm asking for. After everything we were, you owe me that much.

- Rafael

Ex Netlink Employee Found Murdered

Body of Missing Tech Executive Discovered in San Francisco Bay

By Clara Nguyen | Bay Herald | September 15, 1997

San Francisco, CA — The mystery surrounding the disappearance of former Netlink executive Martha Jordan took a grim turn this week, as authorities confirmed her body was discovered floating in the San Francisco Bay late Tuesday afternoon.

The 42-year-old tech professional, known for her sharp intellect and rising influence in Silicon Valley's cybersecurity sector, had been reported missing two weeks ago after failing to show up for a speaking engagement at the Bay Area Tech Futures Conference in Palo Alto. Friends and colleagues raised concerns after repeated attempts to reach her by phone and email went unanswered.

The San Mateo County Sheriff's Office held a press conference Wednesday morning to confirm that the remains found near Pier 14 on the Embarcadero belong to Jordan. Her body was recovered by a local fisherman, who immediately contacted emergency services.

"She was found wrapped in a tarp and weighed down with construction debris," said Sheriff Luis Contreras. "This was not an accident. We are treating this as a homicide."

Authorities are withholding the exact cause of death pending a full autopsy, but sources close to the investigation say signs of blunt force trauma and ligature marks were present. Investigators believe Jordan was killed elsewhere and transported to the bay.

RAFAEL ALAMILLA: THE FALL OF A STAR AND THE HEARTBREAK THAT STILL HAUNTS HIM

Los Angeles, CA — It's hard to remember a time when Rafael Alamilla wasn't the name on everyone's lips.

In the late 1980s, the Latino actor was a Hollywood sensation—his chiseled jawline, piercing eyes, and captivating performances in blockbuster films made him an international heartthrob. He was a regular on the red carpet, a magnet for magazine covers, and the leading man in romantic dramas that dominated the box office. Hollywood had its newest star, and he had everything: fame, fortune, and the love of one of the most famous actresses of the time, Cynthia Doyle.

But now, at 42, Alamilla is a shadow of the man he once was.

His name still rings a bell in industry circles, but mostly for all the wrong reasons: a string of failed projects, tabloid gossip about his struggles with addiction, and the long, public unraveling of his relationship with Doyle.

The breakup in 1998 after seven years of being one of Hollywood's golden couples marked the true beginning of his fall from grace.

The Rise of Rafael Alamilla

In the late 80s, Alamilla's career seemed unstoppable. With breakout roles in films like Crimson Nights and The Edge of Tomorrow, he earned critical acclaim and a loyal fan base. His intense portrayal of troubled characters made him a leading contender for the kind of roles that award shows loved. But it was his relationship with Cynthia Doyle, the celebrated A-list actress best known for her roles in The Silver Lining and The Secret of the Stars, that cemented him as one half of Hollywood's most beloved couple.

"They were the epitome of 'relationship goals,'" says Variety film critic, Ian Montgomery. "Cynthia and Rafael were everywhere! on magazine covers, in charity events, at movie premieres. The public adored them."

But it wasn't just the fame that kept them in the public eye. There was undeniable chemistry between the two, both on and off-screen. They starred together in Neil Torres Falling Sky, a film that was lauded for its intimate portrayal of a couple's emotional unraveling, perhaps foreshadowing their own lives.

"There was a time when the world was watching them, and it seemed like they could do no wrong," says actress Nancy Sparrow, a close friend of both Doyle and Alamilla. "They were everything, the dream couple, the perfect match."

But like most dreams, it all began to unravel.

By the time Cynthia Doyle announced her breakup with Alamilla in a tear-filled interview on The Late Show in 1998, the signs had already been there. The once-inseparable couple had become distant, rumors of infidelity, substance abuse, and emotional neglect swirling in the tabloids. Still, fans held on to hope, hoping it was just another round of media hype. But when Doyle publicly confirmed the split, it was like the final act of a tragic drama, and it left Alamilla in pieces.

"It wasn't just the loss of a relationship, it was the loss of everything," Alamilla confessed in a rare interview with Rolling Stone in 1999. "Cynthia was my world. She was my rock. But I think we both knew the real problem wasn't just that we weren't working as a couple, it was that I had lost myself. And I couldn't find my way back."

The breakup was the catalyst for Alamilla's spiraling decline. He disappeared from the public eye for months, only to re-emerge as a shadow of his former self rumored to be battling alcoholism and depression.

SENATOR JUDITH PALMER'S RISE — AND THE TECH GIANT SHADOW FOLLOWING HER

By Lauren Chavez | The Capitol Ledger | September 15, 1999

Los Angeles, CA — With soaring approval ratings, a sweeping economic justice agenda, and a growing national donor base, Senator Judith Palmer is poised to announce what many have suspected of months: a run for the presidency in 2000.

At 47, the first-term Democratic Senator from California quickly became a force in national politics, combining the polished charisma of a seasoned leader with the activist edge of a grassroots organizer. Her speeches, fiery but focused, have gone viral more than once. Her climate jobs bill passed in the Senate with bipartisan support. And in a fractured party searching for direction, Palmer is, increasingly, the answer.

But as Palmer's star rises, so do questions, and not from the usual partisan suspects. Quietly but persistently, a different narrative is beginning to emerge: What exactly is Judith Palmer's relationship with Netlink?

Palmer's political journey began not in Washington, but in East Los Angeles, where she built a reputation as a no-nonsense reformer during her years as a state assemblymember. Her landslide Senate victory in 2024 was widely credited to her "California for All" platform a progressive economic blueprint centered on labor rights, clean energy jobs, and housing reform.

Since arriving in Washington, Palmer has authored or co-sponsored over 30 bills, more than any other first-term senator. Her office is known for its fast-paced operation, stacked with policy wonks and veteran organizers.

"She's the rare mix of intellect and instinct," says Democratic strategist Maya Chen. "She speaks to the heart of working America, but she plays the long game like a chess master."

But behind the scenes, Palmer's long-standing relationship with Netlink, a California-based tech conglomerate that builds global data infrastructure, has begun to raise eyebrows.

Campaign finance records show that between 2018 and 2023, Netlink and its senior executives donated over $2.4 million to political action committees (PACs) that later funneled money into Palmer's state and federal campaigns. Palmer's office has repeatedly stated that all donations were legal, properly reported, and not coordinated with any corporate actors.

Still, public scrutiny intensified after the FBI raided Netlink headquarters in August over alleged violations of federal privacy laws and unauthorized surveillance programs.

Subject: The Cynthia Problem

Judith, you've seen the rumors, I'm sure. Cynthia's name is starting to pop up in circles where it doesn't belong. Normally I wouldn't care, she's a celebrity, not a credible threat. But lately, she's been asking questions about Net link's early investor cycles and certain financial timelines we'd all rather not see aired out in public. Whether she actually understands what she's circling is another matter. But that doesn't change the risk. It only takes one reporter looking for a "deep state-tech" headline to turn a tabloid whisper into a full-blown problem. We're in a fragile window. You know that better than anyone. The optics around your platform and our growth are linked. If someone pulls back the curtain before the exit, we both take the fall.

So, here's where we are:

Option 1: Discredit

We do this the old-fashioned way. A bad tabloid cycle. A "leaked" audio. Push the narrative that she's spiraling again. It doesn't have to be ugly it just has to be loud enough to drown out whatever she thinks she knows. If she loses the room, the rest takes care of itself.

Option 2: Eliminate the Variable

She's high-profile, but reckless. Parties, events, private homes packed with strangers. No one would bat an eye if something happened at one of those. She surrounds herself with chaos, we don't need to create any. We just need to be standing nearby when the moment presents itself.

I was a good friend to Cynthia; she was my best friend. We shared everything together. Our Highs our lows Our traumas.

When I came to this party, I thought I was going to meet up with that friend and we would enjoy the new millennium together. But instead, I walked into a nightmare. Cynthia was dead.

In the weeks leading up to this horrible Murder she had confided in me that her new Boyfriend Devin Park was a Con artist. I always hated that man from the first moment I met him. And I was happy to have a good reason to hate him now.

Tipped off Rafael, her other terrible ex-boyfriend, she decided to create an Expose statement. One that she had already sent yesterday. But despite Futility in trying to silence her know someone did. Someone Killed my best friend. And I think we all know who that was. But I'm not a killer I didn't kill Devin, and I'm a bit more baffled on that one.

I was at my rock bottom before I met Cynthia. I was nearly broke, and horrible addicted, and than two months ago I met the love of my life Cynthia Doyle and a Party not unlike the one we attended today. But through her I also met her horrible boyfriend and his business partner. But perhaps it wasn't all bad. Cynthia was promising to get me into rehab, together me and her would dump Devin and start a new life together.

Cynthia was going to expose the Netlink scam and Alex Deadman and Devin Park needed to do something about it.

as I began my affair with Cynthia Alex Deadman contacted me providing me easy access to hard drugs with the condition that I spy on Cynthia for her. I caved, I was following my addiction and not my heart and for that I will always feel guilty because in a way although I didn't kill Cynthia, I do feel responsible.

Cynthia Found out I was spying on her and she was going to use my story of drug addiction as a prime example for how horrible Alex Deadman and Devin Park were. But... I couldn't let her do that It would destroy my reputation. And so instead of facing the music I told Alex everything, and I encouraged Alex to silence her. So that no one could know my shameful secret.

As for Devin, I didn't kill him. That was unexpected.

I didn't Kill Cynthia or Devin. But my observation here tonight have provided me ample inspiration for a Murder Mystery Whodunit Film. But enough about that.

But I'm sure you're all wondering why a reclusive Film director myself would have come out to a party like this.

Well, I heard from my Dear Friend Rafael that Cynthia was planning so big expose, and I had initially Feared it was on me. Since I can be a bit of harsh Director sometimes. Cynthia Herself has blacklisted ever working with me again since last time.

I was looking around upstairs to find Cynthia's Expose as I saw she had it on her person when she came in.

But after seeing it wasn't about me, I felt a big weight off my shoulders. As for the Culprit to the Murder of Cynthia and her new boyfriend I'm not sure, but my theory is that Charlotte Pearce is still lying and that Jealous that she was only Cynthia's Side piece Murdered Cynthia and Devin in Cold Blood.

But that's only My theory, It would make a good movie, however.

My campaign means everything to me. But in today's world you need donors and wealthy backers and Business is just another part of politics. Some would call it corruption, but I have never seen it that way.

Netlink should have been a successful forward-thinking company and yet it wasn't. It was a con and I was too stupid to see it and yet I got caught up in it. I needed a con to succeed, and things might have been okay. I worked with Devin, and he said he was going to turn the company around. I had planned to propose a bill to Digitize our social security Records Using Devens Company and then Cynthia Doyle was going to expose the whole operation. and not only that Alex Deadman told me I was going to exposed too.

And well I couldn't let that happen. I told Alex and Devin to do something about it. But I meant like a cease and desist. Sue her ass until she shuts up. Not... Sigh This wasn't supposed to happen.

When Cynthia was Murdered, I knew my life was over. I was too much in shock. But The universe really wanted to kick me when I was down. Not only did Cynthia die, but Devin did also. I didn't Kill Cynthia Doyle, but Devin Park Did.

I met Devin Park 3 years ago and He pitched an amazing idea. To use this new internet technology to revolutionize human record keeping and connection. I was sold and I made millions off of that investment its wealth.

But it was all a sham. Devin Park had a website surely, but no one wanted to use it. The site was bleeding thousands of dollars every year only sustained by venture capital. Venture capital Devin was using to fund his Extravagant lifestyle instead of improving the company. The last time the website was updated was 2 years ago. Devin hasn't worked on it at all.

For everyone that worked at Netlink it was apparent what was going on. Martha Jordan an up-and-coming Software Engineer threatened to expose Devin first. So, he begged me to help him.

and I did. I was desperate, I couldn't lose everything I had built. His company had taken me from nothing to a multi-millionaire.

So, I lured her to my home promising a fancy dinner for her and Devin to celebrate a top employee of a company I cared deeply about. And then... Devin Murdered her. I helped him hide the body; we took it out on my private yacht into the Bay. We weighed down the body and dropped her in. Unfortunately, it didn't keep her body down and it washed up on the shore later on.

After that... Life Continued on. But then there was a second threat. Devin's new girlfriend is Cynthia. He wanted to murder her like last time, but I refused. I told him we couldn't do this again. But He insisted. It's like something in that man was broken. He wanted to kill her... But I talked him out of it. We were formulating a plan.

I Exploited Cynthia's new affair partner Charlotte Pearce with her rumored drug addiction to get information on Cynthia.

And we learned that the exposal was coming soon. I was going to file a lawsuit tomorrow like we had discussed with Judith but...

Devin wanted to kill her. And he did.

After her body was found I confronted Devin, and he admitted to me that he had killed Cynthia. But there was no hiding the body this time. How could he be so stupid. For a moment there I thought my life was over, I truly did.

But I hatched a plan to save myself.

Rafael had been sending Devin Death threats since he started his relationship with Cynthia. Since he was at the party, I had hoped that I could frame Him for the Murder of Cynthia, and the murder of Devin Park. The story would be that he was Jealous of the new lovers, and he murdered both of them out of envy. It was a plan so crazy it just might work.

Include Folded inside first page

I forged a love note. A careful eye would notice that the Cheque and note have identical handwriting. I than Confronted Devin one last time but I dragged him into the downstairs washroom and strangled him. I left the love note on his body, and I began trying to frame Rafael, but I suppose it was all for nothing.

The pressure got on me, and I just had to come clean.

That's the story. Devin Killed Cynthia, and I killed Devin Park.
